Summer in Costa Rica 2012
Social Justice, Environment and Language
Dates: May 20th – June 30th, 2012

One of the longest running programs of the Stone Center, the program in Costa Rica is always an incredible way to spend some weeks in Central America. And starting with summer of 2012 you can receive 10 credits while traveling all over this amazing country. What about combining a Service-Learning class on Social Justice and Civic Engagement with a course on Climate Change, Biodiversity and Tropical Ecology? And what about adding into the mix a Spanish class, or maybe even do an internship in a Costa Rican organization working on issues of Social Justice?

Whatever classes you choose, your main base for these weeks will be the beautiful campus of CIAPA (Centro de Investigación y Adiestramiento Político Administrativo), which has the feel of a tropical oasis in the midst of Costa Rica’s impressive capital city of San José. CIAPA is a prestigious academic research institution with a distinguished track record of research and scholarship in the social sciences. The main building on the small campus houses multiple lecture and seminar rooms. The campus also includes a wonderful dormitory where you will be housed along with fellow Tulane program participants.

Courses

During this summer program, the students will enroll in the first two courses below and will choose the third one from among Spanish or Internship:

- LAST 3950 with LAST 3890: This course, taught in English, will explore notions of citizenship and concepts of social justice in Latin America from a theoretical perspective, and will supplement this in-class learning with actual practical application in the community through a 40-hour Service-Learning placement. This is a 300-level, 4-credit course and enrolling in this course would allow you to fulfill either the first-tier or the second-tier Service-Learning requirement.

- EBIO 2120 Climate Change, Biodiversity, and Tropical Forests, Ecology and Evolutionary Biology: Most of the world’s plants and animals live in the tropics. The complexity, beauty, and diversity of tropical forests make them a treasure trove of spectacular scenery, genetic and biochemical resources with uses practical and unforeseen, the source of much of our knowledge of how ecological systems have evolved, and the storage of much of the world’s carbon. As the world’s climate changes rapidly because of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere, tropical forests may be severely threatened. Learn in this course about the structure and ecology of tropical forests. Learn to distinguish among rainforests, cloud forests, and dry forests, between old-growth and secondary forests. Explore the relationships among plants, animals, soil organisms, soils, water, and climate. Learn about the real social and economic causes of deforestation and grass roots efforts to revert it. And finally, understand, as much as anyone does, the social, political, economic, and biological logic of world climate change agreements and disagreements.

- Spanish: SPAN 2030 or SPAN 3130/4130 (consult us about higher levels Spanish classes) will be taken at the University of Costa Rica, one of the most prestigious academic institutions in the region. Pre-certified by Tulane University for Spanish course credit, the language classes along with the field trips will improve your written and oral Spanish abilities.

- LAST 4570: Social Justice Internship: Tulane, through CIAPA, is developing partnerships with a variety of local governmental and non-governmental organizations that will host students as interns. Students may have the opportunity to work with a variety of government entities charged with civic education and the protection of human rights. Students may also have the opportunity to partner with grass-roots, non-governmental organizations that work on reducing drop-out rates in high schools, primarily in poor and marginalized communities. Additional opportunities to work with organizations promoting social justice and civic-capacity building are also being developed.
Costs and Application

Cost of the program is $5650 and includes corresponding credits at Tulane, room and meals at CIAPA, medical insurance, specialized tours and outings designed for participants in the program. Airfare and incidental costs are not included in the program cost. Participants should expect to pay approximately $500-$800 for airfare (airfare rates subject to change). Students participating in the program should expect to bring additional money to cover entertainment and other incidental costs.

Undergraduate students wishing to apply must be in good academic standing and have at least a cumulative grade point average of 2.5. In addition to a complete application form, each participant must secure two (2) letters of recommendation, and submit a current official transcript with his/her application.

Complete applications (including application form, current transcript, two letters of recommendation, and the housing form) and a $300 non-refundable deposit are due no later than 5:00 p.m. on March 2, 2012 in the Stone Center for Latin American Studies (Jones Hall, Tulane University.) The balance of the program costs is due upon acceptance into the program. The final payment may be made by MasterCard, Visa, check, or money order. Checks should be made payable to Tulane University and submitted directly to Natalia Porto at the Stone Center. Note that airfare is not included in the official program costs.

Students at Tulane seeking student loans to cover costs of this program should contact the Financial Aid office as soon as possible. Please be sure to indicate that you are seeking a loan for a SUMMER PROGRAM. All students who will be receiving Financial Aid are still individually responsible for submitting a payment for the full program price directly to Natalia Porto at the Stone Center. The indication of an available balance in a student’s Accounts Receivable balance will not be sufficient; the student must still produce a check/money order/credit card payment for the full amount due to the program. (Note: You can now cover part of your cost through a TULASO Scholarship for Summer Programs. Look for more info on our website!)
